The DIMMER VIEW

Waste and Inflation is Target

Here is a look at the high success of Prop. 13 as a forerunner to a coming battle against inflation.

13 was almost frenetically supported by some of those who felt it was the only voice they had against the way their government was boondoggling their tax money and their existence.

True, most wanted tax reductions. But the thinking people who supported it wanted equally, it seems, to have waste taken out of myriad bureaus, commission agencies and departments.

There was a predictable reaction from those connected with government. Threats of no fire protection; school would be closed; police departments cut back and dramatic increases in rubbish removal were threatened.

No one, it seems, cares to talk about the fat in most of the agencies; fat in our giveaway programs; fat in our foreign aid experiments, nor even an audit of your tax sweat money which your lawmakers spend as they, with their families and staff members, take junkets over the globe to get away from the snarling, angry dissidents who are beginning to be heard louder as the tax waste grows.

HEW looks at waste in a normal bureaucratic way. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare admits to $5.5-$6.5 billion waste annually.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano has called for a money waste reduction of 4 percent. With 100 percent of the waste as target, it would take 25 years to cut all of it out. Why hasn't he the courage to stop it right now?

Yet judges of San Diego's Municipal and Superior Courts who disburse wisdom and justice, took a look at inflation and decided to give themselves a raise. Municipal Court wages rise from $45,235 to $47,497. Superior Court judges go from $49,166 to $51,618. We think such judgment is outrageous.

There is sheer anger in some of the fall-out of Prop. 13 locally.

S.D. City Council and the County Board of Supervisors respectively decided to smother the growth of the S.D. Police Department and the Sheriff's Department rather than to look to departments that are overstaffed and to the programs that are useless.

No one in government, it seems, wants to reduce his fiefdom. We'll dump people services but don't change the size of our bureau, is what they seem to be saying.

It wasn't long ago that activists in the local education political apparatus contrived to have sports programs—football, for example—canceled when opposition to the groups' demands arose. I think education lost a lot of sympathy in that operation.

The concern over government spending isn't restricted solely to California. TIME Magazine, current issue, reports that President Carter's popularity has dropped alarmingly. Today, only 38 percent approving his performance in the White House. His apathy has failed to establish anti-inflation programs. That worries people.

His fall from favor has encouraged former President Gerald Ford to consider the possibility of tossing his hat in the political ring again.

Everywhere you can see minor revolts. Locally, Armin Moths, an official of the United States Taxpayers' Union (USTU) claims that a petition to rescind the federal income tax laws is underway and signatures are being added in such numbers that state legislature and the U.S. Congress will have to face the fact that people are resisting overwhelming taxes and IRS intimidation.

It is said that the number of citizens who are filing federal income tax returns but not paying the bill have grown unbelievably but no one can get a figure on the total from IRS offices, it was said.

Such are the shadings on a canvas of far greater proportions. Few people will deny that the air bristles with resistance and resentment. Some of the smarter pols are getting the message. There can be no honest reform until that most ponderous of all democratic machinery—the secret ballot—changes it.

And that, my friends, is just now beginning to inch forward.

Attorney to Address SD Legal Secretaries

Attorney Rex L. Jones, III will be the guest speaker at the San Diego Legal Secretaries Association's membership meeting next Monday. Jones' topic will be "Preparing Disposition Documents, Including Problem Areas; Pleading the Cary-Marvin Relationship (Living Together But Not Married)." A syllabus covering this topic will be distributed to those in attendance.

The meeting will be held at the Hanalei Hotel, 2270 Hotel Circle North, San Diego. The social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:15 p.m. The program is scheduled to begin at 7:15 p.m.

The meeting will kick off the association's annual membership drive and is directed towards encouraging all those employed in the legal field, in trust departments of banks or trust companies, or in any public or private institution directly engaged in work of a legal nature, including all public offices on a federal, state, county or city level, who have been continuously employed in San Diego County in such an office for a period of at least 6 months, to apply for membership.

Benefits of membership include low-cost education gained through seminars, monthly educational programs, monthly bulletins which include court cues, legal procedure articles, and much more. Also available to members are life insurance, medical insurance, credit union and pension plans.

This event is under the chairmanship of Pat Schmidt, PLS, of Pacific Beach. All those interested in membership should contact Ms. Schmidt at 236-1717.

Blue Cross Moves

Blue Cross of Southern California's San Diego Regional Office has moved to 3578 Old Town ave., Suite 106, 2 miles from downtown San Diego. The new telephone numbers subscriber service.

The 120,000 subscribers from San Diego and Imperial counties will now have easier access to the office since it is near public transportation and Interstate 5.

The new office is larger than the previous facility at 4121 Camino Del Rio, South, allowing for continued expansion and growth of services. The old location was bought by National University for conversion into classrooms, also necessitating the move.

'Born Yesterday' Opens at Fiesta Dinner Theatre

"Born Yesterday," Garson Kanin's tough-and-tender comedy with ethical overtones, opened at Spring Valley's Fiesta Dinner Theatre last night and will continue through August 20.

The story circles around a roughneck, illiterate war profiteer who tries to have his ex-chorus line girl friend educated. The girl, in turn, picks up social graces and social conscience from a young journalist hired to tutor her.

Ralph Meeker and Nancy Hunter will be seen as the couple. The original roles of the play, which took Broadway and motion pictures by storm, were played by Paul Douglas, Judy Holliday and Gary Merrill.

The show under executive director Frank Wayne will run nightly except Mondays. A Wednesday matinee and Sunday brunch are also offered.

Regular admission price for dinner, show, parking and tax is $10 Tuesday, $11.50 Wednesday and Thursday, $12 Friday and Sunday, $13.50 Saturday, $9 Wednesday Matinee and Sunday Brunch.

The Fiesta Dinner Theatre is located on 9665 Campo rd., Spring Valley, Kenwood dr. exit off Highway 94.

Rancho San Diego Sales Top 50 Percent

Canterbury Hill, a community in Rancho San Diego, has sold over 50% of their Tudor style single family homes according to Patty Simpson, director of sales.

More than $1 million was recorded last week as framing was begun on the 2, 3 and 4 bedroom 2-story homes in the first phase, priced from $88,900 to $112,900.

Ranging in size from 1671 sq. ft. to 2171 sq. ft., Canterbury Hill homes feature French doors, exterior balconies, built-in wet bars and double lavatories in most plans.

3 model homes will be completed for viewing at a Grand Opening scheduled for late August. A total of 71 homes, most with views, will be built.

A temporary sales office, located at 10804 Charing Cross rd., will be open daily 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Canterbury Hill is reached from Hwy. 94 via the Sweetwater Springs Blvd. exit.

He has been reassigned to the Central Civil Bureau downtown where he will serve processes on military bases and some civil organizations.

He said he had initiated the transfer because "I have attended only a handful of PTA meetings during the past years and all of a sudden my daughter, Linda, is a senior. As a patrol officer I serve many nights when PTA's are meeting. Now I can take part in the educational processes as every parent should."

"I have another daughter, Brenda, just starting kindergarten. I'll be able to be an active PTA member—maybe even a band parent—in my new job which is 8 hours a day, Monday through Friday."

"My son David is in the 10th grade and Gary in the 9th grade. I'll get to see them in basketball (David) and football (Gary)." David was named MVP in the S.V. Spring Hoop League earlier this year.

Pugh has been a sheriff's deputy for 9½ years.

Robbery Suspects Still at Large

Two male suspects in a robbery July 12 outside the Bank of America building on 3099 Imperial ave., Lemon Grove, are still at large.

The robbery occurred as a 54-year-old messenger, who approached the bank building in the morning, was pushed in the back by a young man and two bags containing more than $4,500 were torn from his hands.

Although the suspect was chased by the victim, he escaped in a 1966 Chevrolet driven by another young man. The car turned east on Lincoln and headed toward Skyline dr.

A second car was seen circling the bank during the robbery and leaving immediately after the Chevrolet sped away.

Deputy sheriffs and San Diego Police officers pursued the car which was eventually abandoned by the suspects while still rolling and hit the bedroom of an apartment building at 5157 Groveland, San Diego. Nobody was hurt in the collision.

The suspects are still at large. Two Bank of America deposit bags containing more than $2,000, a jacket and a set of keys were found in the car, which had been reported stolen the night before the robbery.

Investigations are continuing.

LG Council To Fight State To Keep Local Control

The Lemon Grove City Council, in its first meeting in nearly a month, covered a wide range of items.

The July 3 meeting was continued until Monday this week because there was not a quorum for the holiday meet. That gave a spread from June 19 to July 17, for council to meet in public.

The usual "brown bag" meetings on Tuesday were held—July excepted.

Council members showed grave concern Monday night for recent actions in Sacramento. AB 154 for instance, by which state surplus funds are to be distributed, was tagged unfair. In a resolution, council showed strong opposition by declaring that 154 shifts major local decisions from local to State level and that both bills encourage increased local spending in order to qualify for sharing; regulates such local issues as employee salary levels, local government staffing levels and size and use of local reserve funds. Requiring the use of local reserve funds violates the principles of prudent fiscal planning and ignores the fact that State surplus funds belong to the local taxpayers—including those of Lemon Grove—and should be returned to them.

What bothered council members is that State sharing of surplus is based on prior city (3 years) property tax income. Lemon Grove as a new city has no prior record and will receive little, if any, of the surplus fund to which local residents have contributed.

Council also issued a resolution condemning SB 2212, a planning bill introduced by Assemblyman Peter Chacon and Larry Kapiloff giving the State more voice in local operations.

Councilman Dale Bailey said that "They seem to be upset in Sacramento that cities are demanding local control and they are saying 'We're Big Daddy and we should have control'."

"State is taking away our privileges to say what we want in our cities," Bailey said.

"It's the most devastating bill ever to come down the pike," Bailey said of the regional planning bill. He said the City should send a councilman to Sacramento to protest it.

Mayor Dorman said that Kapiloff reported last week that the bill was only 3 votes short of a majority. City manager Jack Sheller sees it as a step toward state control over local planning.

In another matter which has plagued council over the months is the Lemon Grove Park operation. There now appears to be a solution in the near future. Councilman Bob Burns, chairman of the Parks Committee filed a report that would have the park at Washington and Alton open hours changed to 8 a.m. to dusk; chain and lock the parking lot during closed hours; prohibit the use of any hard balls and prohibit amplified sound except by special permit through the police department and only after a month's advance notice, and acquire a park ranger to enforce ordinances that would be ordered by council in line with Councilman Burns' study.

There will also be a persistent effort to provide recreational areas for soccer, ball playing and other sports requiring wide areas and not practical for L.G. Park. The park should be restructured almost exclusively as a picnic area with more tables, he proposed.

In other business, council certified Hartson's Ambulance Service's proposal to supply paramedic and ambulance to the residents of the City at no cost to the City. Paramedic service will cost users $20 in addition to $87 for ambulance service.

A public address system will be installed at meeting quarters. Bids for such installation are in the $5,000-$6,000 range. Councilman Bailey has offered to supervise installation of suitable equipment if it is purchased by the City. The cost, under Bailey's direction, would not exceed $1,600.

A request for rehearing of the electric undergrounding requirement for construction of several small shops near Broadway on Massachusetts was to have opened Monday's meeting but Richard Hibbard, a developer, who requested the rehearing, didn't show up.

Council approved vacation of an alley, east of Corona and running between Broadway and Lemon avenue. City manager Jack Sheller noted that the County Planning Commission had recommended the vacation but action was never taken by the Board of Supervisors. Now EZ-8 Motels has received approval for plans to build a 440 unit motel on the property but cannot start construction as the property is split in two by the unimproved alley. Council approved a resolution to abandon the alley and set August 7 as date for public hearing.

LG Could Get $1 Million From Traffic Citations

By Susanne Williams

Approximately $1 million could be raised in revenue for the city of Lemon Grove under a new traffic control program.

According to city estimates, around $1,450,000 will be taken in through traffic violation citations, of which $427,149 will be paid to the Lemon Grove substation of the County Sheriff's Department for exercising traffic control.

Before July 1 traffic control in Lemon Grove was the responsibility of the California Highway Patrol. Under a new contract between the city and the Sheriff's Department, these functions are now taken over by local deputies.

One 5-day and two 7-day traffic cars, added to the substation's present force, will extend the current level of services. 5 officers have already been retrained for traffic control, Captain George Dodson of the Sheriff's Department said.

The reassignments leave the department temporarily short of people, although additional working hours prevent any decrease in operational readiness. "Shortages naturally result in overtime," Captain Dodson said.

In addition, new officers have been requested from the county. The request will be decided during a Board of Supervisors meeting July 25.

The Sheriff's Department is

"operating under the rather sound feeling" that the request for 9 regular law enforcement and 5 traffic officers, one sergeant and one clerical person, will be approved, Richard Robinson, Chief of Staff Services, Sheriff's Department, said.

Approving the request would be less costly for the county, Robinson said, since salaries for the requested personnel—with the exception of the sergeant and the clerical person—were formerly paid by the county and are now part of Lemon Grove's financial responsibility.

Yet, officers' salaries are only a third of what the city expects to take in through citations. At present, 75 per cent of all citation revenue goes to the city with the remaining 25 per cent allocated to the county.

The bill (AB 2781), which was introduced a couple of months ago through Assemblyman Peter Chacon, is due on the senate floor any day, Lemon Grove mayor Jim Dorman said.

Raising the percentage level from 75 to 92 was an idea that some other cities such as Carlsbad, Vista, San Marcos and Imperial Beach, which incorporated in the '50s and '60s, have already implemented.

Although Proposition 13 was not responsible for the proposed increase in Lemon Grove, "we need it more than ever," Dorman said.

'SOCKY IT TO ME' — Puppets made out of children's socks are great for entertaining other children who are sick, but the "Socksies" are currently out of stock at Children's Hospital and Health Center, so the hospital's Women's Auxiliary is seeking volunteers to make more to give to young patients. Kathy Reynolds, left, is Socky Chairwoman for the auxiliary and her son Matthew, 5, is obviously an old hand at operating one. The auxiliary will supply all materials plus instructions on making the puppets. Potential volunteers should call 292-3132.

Vietnam Vets Urged To Utilize G.I. Bill

If you want to know the true worth of a college education, just ask someone who has used the G.I. Bill to get one. That's the view of the Veterans Administration which this month begins a summer-long campaign to interest more veterans in taking advantage of an unprecedented educational opportunity.

"The G.I. Bill today provides more benefits in more ways for Vietnam Era veterans than it did for any previous group of veterans," according to a VA spokesman.

Statistics show that veterans who complete college have a median annual income of approximately $20,000, while those who ended their formal education after graduating from high school average $12,570 a year.

And the results show up right away. In 1976, veterans between the age of 20 and 34 years who had completed college earned a median income of $14,330 compared to the $10,710 earned by those veterans who had completed only high school.

In addition to the G.I. Bill itself, which pays single veterans up to $311 a month, VA offers education loans, work-study program, and tutorial assistance payments where needed.

The Veterans Administration's goal is to make certain that every eligible veteran is fully aware of the extent and availability of his VA education benefits. Veterans in San Diego, Riverside, and Imperial Counties are served by the VA Regional Office in Mission Valley. The telephone number is 2997-8220 (toll free 1-800-532-3811).

Fine Arts Gallery To Charge Admission

The Fine Arts Society of San Diego's Board of Trustees has voted unanimously to adopt a paid admission policy for the Fine Arts Gallery, effective this month.

Citing threatened budgetary cuts forced by the passage of Proposition 13, Fine Arts Gallery Director Henry G. Gardiner stated "Such a policy is in keeping with our continued efforts to provide the community of San Diego with the very finest in visual arts experiences at the Fine Arts Gallery."

"Both the San Diego City and County governments have repeatedly urged the Gallery over the last five years to introduce a reasonable admissions policy in harmony with other Balboa Park museums. Although the Fine Arts Gallery has resisted such a recommendation in the past, recent fiscal developments have now forced us to comply."

According to the policy established by the Trustees, Fine Arts Society members will be admitted to the museum free of charge upon presentation of a valid membership card. Non-members will be charged $1 per adult, ages 16 and over, and children under 6 years of age accompanied by an adult will be admitted free. Children under 6 not accompanied by an adult will be admitted for 50 cents. Students will also be charged 50 cents. The Trustees also designated each Tuesday as a free admission day, so that no one would be prevented from attending the Gallery.

The Fine Arts Gallery is also considering issuing complimentary passes to certain membership categories and according to Mr. Gardiner, "We trust that community members will come to recognize the added benefits of Fine Arts Society membership and will continue to support the museum and its many programs."

Commission to Promote Sale of Avocados

A San Diego Superior Court has upheld the constitutionality of a new law authorizing the establishment of an Avocado Commission to handle industry promotion of avocados.

According to Richard E. Rominger, Director of the State Department of Food and Agriculture, a permanent injunction sought by several avocado growers who objected to the formation of the commission was denied and a temporary restraining order dissolved.

The Court's action dissolving the restraining order will permit the counting of industry ballots.

Rominger added that if the prescribed number of voters approve, the Avocado Commission will be established to conduct national and international promotion of the product. Research activities will continue to be handled by the existing California Avocado Advisory Board.

Captive Nations Commemorated

A memorial celebration and rally will highlight the 20th annual Captive Nations Week Events Sunday, 1:30 p.m., at the San Diego Community Concourse, B and Second st., San Diego.

The U.S. Congress inaugurated the observance in July 1959 with a resolution authorizing and requesting the President to issue a proclamation designating the third week in July as "Captive Nations Week."

Since the beginning, nine more nations have been added to the 22 previously designated as being under Communist imperialism.

The rally will feature speakers some of which have been imprisoned by either National Socialists of Hitler's Third Reich or Soviet Socialists.

Ethnic groups from captive nations will perform, and representatives of the Judeo-Christian community will offer prayers for the liberty of those who are not free.

Th number to call is 427-6829 or 454-8740.

SD 'Health Guide' To be Published

A new "San Diego County HEALTH GUIDE" is scheduled for publication in July as the only directory of its kind here. Produced by a company called Community Resource Group, a firm structured as a non-profit organization designed to provide health information to the general public, the new HEALTH GUIDE will be published in loose-leaf binder format and distributed to participating health agencies free of charge.

"The only directory we know of is one called 'Directions' which was published by a division of United Way a year or so ago," CRG Coordinator Shari Goldstein said. "That particular directory was computerized in a telephone-book style and no one could read it quickly."

She added that CRG's format—the loose-leaf binder look—will make it easy to read, especially since health agencies are divided into categories inside. "They select the category they wish to be listed under," she said. "Such as mental health, aging, alcoholism services, drugs, crisis etc. We will also cross-reference if there are more services provided in other areas." Crisis numbers or "hot lines" as they are called will be placed up front for easy reference, again in categories.

The new HEALTH GUIDE will be published early in August. Deadline for inclusion is July 21. Anyone wishing a copy should send $3 to CRG, P.O. Box 817002, San Diego 92138 or call 299-3718 9-5 weekdays.

There's An Answer

By Norman Vincent Peale and Rath Stafford Peale
Moved his clothes out

Q. My husband has been seeing another woman and yesterday moved his clothes out. We are both 54 and have been married 35 years. God help me, but I still love him and am so lonely. My blood pressure is way up and my nerves are all on edge. I shake and cry so much. Normally I'm a very happy, contented person. I need advice so desperately.

A. It is possible that you may have been overreacting and that is why your husband moved out. Who would want to stay around someone who shakes and cries so much?

It is right that you should get him back, but you'll never do it until you become again as you once were, a happy, attractive woman. When you do that, the other woman may not have a chance. What's more, you will enhance the possibility of a satisfactory home life.

We have a booklet, "How to Have a Good Day," which has helped others develop more positive attitudes in the face of problems, and a copy of it is on its way to you. Anyone wishing a free copy may write to us in care of Box 500, Pawling, NY 12564.

Discouraged stepmother

Q. After being widowed for five years I married a kind gentle man whom I love very much. Our problem centers around his youngest child, a bright, lovable little boy of 8. Before we were married he was allowed to do exactly as he wished. He lived on Cokes and Rice Crispies. He was anemic, irritable and unhappy.

I truly thought God had placed me in this family to meet their needs and to "save" this little boy. But my husband gets angry when I discipline this child. I am not cruel or harsh. I do not nag. I am firm and insist on obedience in important things, and the little boy loves and respects me.

I never expected it to be easy, but I didn't know how difficult it would really be. Some times I am tempted to end this marriage and return to my lonely but comfortable "cocoon."

A. You have a tough diplomatic problem. You cannot simply avoid the matter and let the child do as he pleases. On the other hand, naturally, you do not want to incur your husband's anger.

Your best tactic is to try to convince your husband by both attitude and action that you want the best for his son. Point out that when a child is denied discipline in the loving atmosphere of the home he is being denied a vital heritage.

As for the little boy, give him large doses of love and approval. When he feels safe and loved he will need less discipline.

Feels like a prude

Q. My daughter would like to have a young man stay overnight as a guest in my home. I have told her I didn't approve of it, and said no. Now she is asking again, and I really feel like such a prude. She is in college and he is also; they are not in their teens. But I am a widow and do not like the idea. What would you suggest?

A. It is your house and every woman's house is her castle. However, a situation like this can be proper and decent.

If your daughter maintains high moral standards it would be a mistake to refuse her request to bring home a friend. Opening your home and heart to young people could bring to you and them happy times.

If there is something you would like to ask Dr. and Mrs. Peale to discuss in this column, write to them in care of Box 500, Pawling, NY 12564.

At Coronado Playhouse

'Sextet' Fresh, Delightful

By Susanne Williams

Not too long ago the Coronado Playhouse promised its 1978-79 season to be "rip-snorting - hilarious - slightly - irreverent - touching - nostalgic - bring - your - box - of - Kleenex - fast - paced and just plain fun."

Judging by Friday's presentation of "Sextet"—a U.S. premiere of Michael Pertwee's London hit — the promise is well kept.

"Sextet" is the second Playhouse adaptation of a British comedy centering around Britons and their dealings with amatory entanglements.

In the play three men and three women in various combinations of marital status cohabit on a yacht which cruises on the Mediterranean.

There is Roger, the yacht owner; Lisa, his seemingly carefree wife from whom he is separated; Denny's, his disaster-prone employee; Valerie, Denny's cliché-ridden wife; Philip, Roger's playwright friend who is not above milking the worst of everything for a bon-mot; and Mercy, Philip's response to the midlife crisis.

Together they sail from embraces to insults on a journey that is marred with bunk beds unsuitable for romance, contact lenses in cognac, and frying pans containing unspeakables.

The concoction and Pertwee's corny-turned-clever dialogue ("discretion is the better part of Valerie's test the stability of eye stomach muscle and barely leave enough room between laughs to recuperate."

Jim Brown as Philip is singularly trying on one's capability to laugh and breathe at the same time. While his lanky frame moves with a dancer's grace through the intrigues he helps to create and resolve, his lines are perfectly timed and thus utterly devastating.

Dixie Wade, whose performance has a strong touch of Jeanne Moreau naughtiness, does ample justice to the person of Lisa who, after all, is not as much of a femme fatale as she intends to be.

In spite of a few slips Byron Teergarden is simply disarming as clumsy, slow-minded Denny's and a believable match for Valerie who is played by Jacqueline Dye with proper determination.

And although one would expect Mercy to be more of a sassy tart and less of a decent, sweet kid, Dawn Acey did well as Philip's companion.

Leslie Hedberg had the thankless task of filling the mute role of yacht boy Juan with as much life as it allowed and handled it nicely.

"Sextet," like a true summer dish, is delightful, fresh and easy to digest. Its great palatability is heightened by Steven Sexe's clever set design that maximizes the Playhouse's awkward stage proportions.

The play under direction of William R. Bruce will run through August 12, Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays at 8 p.m.

LG Man Accepted At Oregon College

Thomas M. Herlihy of 2338 Berry st., Lemon Grove, has been accepted at Linfield College in McMinnville, Oregon.

Herlihy, a graduate of Helix High School, was a member on the All American wrestling team in his last school year and received various offers for his continued education.

He chose the Oregon liberal arts college because he did not care for large schools and because "Oregon is a beautiful place to live," his mother said.

Linfield College has approximately 1,000 students. Herlihy will work towards a degree in general and physical education.

This Week's RECIPE

Mexican Ham 'n' Cheese

Sincronizadas could be called the Mexican version of American grilled cheese sandwiches. Hot off the grill and topped with a generous scoop of nutty guacamole, sincronizadas are a nutritious variation of an old favorite. They are delicious for lunch or dinner, or cut into smaller portions and served as tempting appetizers.

Sincronizadas are easy to prepare, if not to pronounce, and take practically no time at all. This is especially important for those last-minute snacks, hurried lunches or light early-evening suppers.

Sincronizadas with Guacamole

- Sincronizadas
Oil
12 corn tortillas
6 slices packaged ham
4 ounces Monterey Jack cheese, grated
Butter
Guacamole
2 ripe avocados, peeled and seeded
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
¼ teaspoon hot pepper sauce

Lightly oil griddle and heat until a drop of water sizzles across top. Meanwhile, layer sincronizadas in this order: a tortilla, one slice of ham, some grated cheese and a second tortilla.

Lightly butter outsides of tortillas and grill on both sides until golden brown and cheese melts. Cut each sandwich into quarters. Before serving, prepare the guacamole by mashing the avocados and adding remaining ingredients; mix thoroughly.

To eat, spoon guacamole on to sincronizadas quarters. Makes 4 to 6 meal-size servings or 24 appetizers.

BUSY SCHEDULE — Barbara Doran, receptionist at the DeLoux School of Cosmetology, checks the day's schedule with Eugene DeLoux at the La Mesa headquarters. Operational activity for the firm's 16 schools originates here. The organization is the largest cosmetology school system in the State of California.

Cosmetology Opportunities Abound Says Schools' Owner

By Max Goodwin

Eugene DeLoux, president of the DeLoux School of Cosmetology with its 16 statewide training salons, is properly high on cosmetology as a profession.

He gave up a career in banking just 5 years ago to organize his firm which he made into the largest of its type in the State of California.

His success he believes, is the high degree of professionalism that his schools have injected into the art.

"Professional - wise our schools have assumed leadership in California and we constantly strive to update the profession even more."

"The average age of our students is 24. Their professional life lies ahead for them. Intelligent young people are finding cosmetology more fulfilling and profitable than it once was. The field offers more opportunities than just cutting and curling."

"Solid grounding in basics with full professionalism as the target has opened opportunities in high-paying, collateral fields—such as becoming representatives for major cosmetics manufacturers — Helene Curtis, Conway, Clairol, Redken Laboratories and others."

"Then there is a great need for fully professional schools which give qualified people a chance to 'be their own boss' by operating their own schools."

DeLoux noted that there is no problem with getting jobs once the cosmetologist becomes professional.

But he warned that the profession is a never-ending learning requirement. Many financially successful DeLoux students return to update their knowledge. "Those who are the most successful continue to strive for high goals. There Headquarters for his schools is at 8127 La Mesa Blvd., La Mesa. A school in Lemon Grove is at 3135 Imperial ave. is no limit to achievements among those who are properly prepared," he added.

Former News Reporter To Open Assessor Try

The former managing editor of the San Diego Independent newspaper chain has been selected to manage the Barbara Hutchinson for San Diego County Assessor campaign.

Lil Wagner, whose candidate listed herself as a tax protester on the June 6 primary ballot, plans to capitalize on the anti-tax mood expressed by the passage of Proposition 13 in Hutchinson's bid to become the "Lesser Assessor."

"Hutchinson, who received only 463 fewer primary votes than the incumbent, publicly supported the Jarvis-Gann initiative and promises to implement its provisions as rapidly as possible following her election this November," Wagner said.

Hutchinson, aside from required filing and printing fees, spent only about $19 during the primary campaign.

Wagner, recently the advertising production manager for a retail chain in Salt Lake City, returned to San Diego late last year.

Headquarters can be reached at 238-1344.

Horse Fancier to Chair 1978 COMBO Auction

Mrs. William B. (Kay) Rippee, a native San Diegan with a love of thoroughbred horse racing, will chair this year's annual gala dinner auction for the arts, "COMBO '78 Presents The Winner's Circle."

The black-tie affair, built around a racing theme, will be held November 4 at Vacation Village, the site of last year's lively event. The evening's festivities will include a silent auction, gourmet dinner, entertainment, and the live auction of vacation trips, furs, jewelry, and antiques.

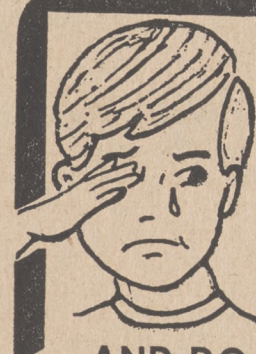

The decor will be drawn from the bright colors of racing silks familiar to Mrs. Rippee.

Formerly chairperson of the Mercy and Mardi Gras Ball, Mrs. Rippee is a member of the Mercy Hospital Auxiliary, Social Service Auxiliary, Belles of Mental Health, Fine Arts Society, and Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge. She is a sustaining member of Juniors of Social Service and a member of the board of directors of the San Diego Opera.

Last year, COMBO Gala '77 raised $94,700, the highest proceeds for the annual event since 1973. Funds are shared by the 17 members of COMBO, the Combined Arts and Education Council of San Diego County.

Members of COMBO are California Ballet, Centro Cultural de la Raza, Civic Youth Orchestra, La Jolla Museum of Contemporary Art, La Jolla Chamber Music Society, North County Community Theatre, Vista, Old Globe Theatre and Carter Center Stage, Patio Playhouse, Escondido, San Diego Ballet, San Diego Civic Light Opera (Starlight), San Diego Civic Youth Ballet, San Diego Junior Theatre, San Diego Opera, San Diego Symphony, San Diego Symphonic Chorus, Southeast San Diego Community Theatre, Young Audiences.

Padres Open 12-Game Homestand Fri. Night

The Padres begin a 12-game homestand Friday entertaining the Chicago Cubs for 3 games. The Friday, Saturday games start at 7 with a 1 p.m. starting time for Sunday's meeting.

Then Pittsburgh comes to town for 3 with the Thursday set to starting at 1 p.m.—it being a businessmen's afternoon.

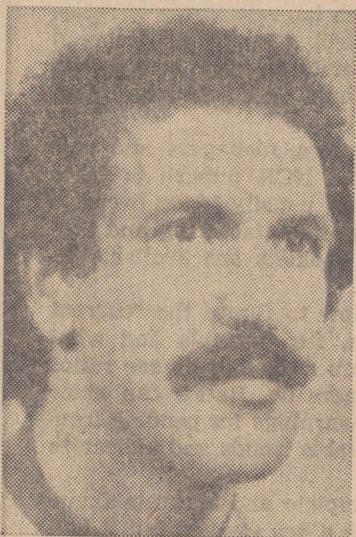

The Cards arrive on July 28 for a trio. The final of the 3 being a Sunday game at 1 p.m.

The above teams have one thing in common. It is their last visit this season to California's Finest City.

But the Dodgers, who are here for the July 31, August 1 and 2 games, will be back for three games ending on Sunday October 1 which also closes the Padres home season.

The Padres have a chance to battle back to the mystical, magical .500 mark since they have played winning ball on their home lawn.

The 'Tulsa Kid' Finds Happiness with Sockers

Peter Nover

By Max Goodwin

The Tulsa Kid wasn't long in Tulsa.

Peter Nover, Sockers' new middle defender and North American Soccer League's tallest player, came to the San Diego Sockers by way of Boston and Hawaii. He was lodged in Tulsa only long enough to get his name in the record book.

In 1976, with Boston, he made 2 goals. In 1977 with Hawaii he made 7. This year he came to S.D. in an exchange for a player and cash.

"I hope to stay in San Diego a long time," Nover said this week. "The Sockers have a fine team with some of the league's outstanding players. Given a chance to play with one team regularly I should be able to improve my game considerably."

He isn't a poor player by any means. He scored 10 points for Boston and last year in Hawaii he was considered the best player on the team, scoring 10 goals from a defensive position. So far this year as a Socker he has garnered 8 points on 3 goals and 6 assists.

Don't let low total goals fool you. A yarn credited to L.A. TIMES sportswriter Jim Murray says it best when he reported that the "home soccer team ran away against the opponent, handling the ball expertly and manipulating the opponents at will. Final score: 1-0."

So much for a low-scoring sport.

Nover, 6-5, is said to be the biggest player in NASL but has been labeled a "clean" player with only 22 fouls last year. So far this year he has 37. Fouls are usually committed to stop a play. Color Nover more aggressive, although he will not admit it.

"Being big (195 lbs.) doesn't help much. Smaller players aren't intimidated by size. They are usually quicker. At least on the take-off. I have Friday's return opener will give fans a chance to view the Padres new 1st baseman Broderick Perkins who was batting .307 as this was written. He was recently called up from Hawaii.

There are some dandy promotions on tap, too. Saturday night 25,000 full-color All-Star posters will go to fans.

All-Star T-shirts will go to the first 15,000 youngsters entering the Big Stadium.

The Businessman's Special, already noted, comes on July 27 at 1 p.m. 15 diamonds valued at $9,000 will be distributed by Sears at the August 2 game.

Also, of considerable interest, is the condition of Derrel Thomas. He will return to activity during the approaching homestand. Having been on the disabled list until then, his return will send someone on. Management indicated it was not known who that player might be.

Lipizzans on Stage In San Diego Sunday

Joining the Royal Lipizzan Stallions when they appear Sunday at Golden Hall for 3 and 8 p.m. shows will be a chunky little Appaloosa named Chief Bear Paws providing the touch of comedy.

Trainer and rider Gaylord Maynard said the comedy reflects many years of dedication to the art of horsemanship and working with his horse. He said the act comes off so well because Chief Bear Paws believes he is always winning and that Maynard is, in reality, a turkey.

Another favorite with audiences is Charles Skelton, riding his magnificent Andalusians Robin and Gallardo. He demonstrates the agility and versatility of this breed which traces back some 8,000 years by controlling his horse without reins in his hands.

The Lipizzaners will perform the difficult "airs above the grounds" maneuvers for which they are famous, including the capriole, levade and courbette.

Tickets for the Sunday performances are on sale at the Center box office and Select-a-Seat outlets with special discount coupons available at the UPCO animal supply stores.

Rewin of Del Mar Title Eyed by Laffit Pincay

Laffit Pincay, Jr., who held off the season-long challenge of Darrel McHargue last summer to capture his second straight Del Mar riding championship, will defend his title against a superlative jockey colony during the 1978 meeting, which gets under way Wednesday, July 26.

Pincay, winner of three Eclipse Awards since beginning his U.S. career in 1977, altered his schedule of going east in 1976 to compete regularly at Del Mar and ran off with the title while accounting for a record 12 stakes events. The 31-year-old Panamanian currently holds a sizable lead in quest of his eighth Hollywood Park crown.

That Pincay could gather only 51 victories last season compared with a near-record 86 the year before underscores the increasingly stiff competition at Del Mar.

Chief among Pincay's rivals is McHargue, the 1975 champion at Del Mar, who is enjoying a fine year. The 24-year-old Oklahoman captured the Santa Anita championship with 136 victories, just two shy of Pincay's record, and established a new mark with 14 stakes triumphs during that season. McHargue is presently battling for the national lead in both races and money won.

Bill Shoemaker, Del Mar's all-time leader in races won (659) and added-money tallies (55), will be trying for his eighth Del Mar title. The Shoe won 6 straight championships at the seaside track from 1949-1954, then returned after a 15-year absence to take his 7th title in 1970.

Another former national king, Chris McCarron, figures

Texas Boxing Champ KO'd in 3rd Round

Terry Krueger is heavy-weight boxing champion of the State of Texas.

He came to San Diego Friday night to fight.

He had won 35 fights—all of them by knockouts. It was a championship fight. The Texas champ going against Fili Moala, the heavy-weight champion of Tonga. Maolo has pretty good credentials, too. He has won 18 fights, 15 of them by KO's—until Friday. Then it became 19-16.

Moala decked Krueger 3 times. Two of them counted. Krueger was dropped just as the bell rang ending the 2nd round. That one didn't count. An 8-count earlier in the round did count. So did the one at 35 seconds into the 3rd. Krueger couldn't respond. The fight was over.

Krueger's record of 35-8-1 made him appear to be on his way to stardom. He looked fit at 203½ lbs., but Moala, at 237 lbs. caught him with a couple of sweeping overhand rights in the first round and that probably took the starch out of Krueger.

In other bouts, Bert Lee, the pride of the Mountain Empire, won a split decision over Joel Carranza of Riverside. Carranza might have won the scrap but he kept spitting his mouthpiece when the going got tough and the welterweight was penalized a point in the 4th of the 6 rounds. That lost it for him. It was that close.

Lightweight boxer Eric Bonilla of Paradise Hills took a unanimous 6-round decision from Bob Wilcott, also of San Diego. Bonilla said he was fighting for his newly arrived son, Eric Jr., who weighed 9½ lbs. at birth. He was born since his father's last appearance at the Coliseum. Bonilla Sr. now has a 6-4-3 record.

The next card will be on July 28 at 8:15 when a replay of the Sgt. Lenix Provo - Ronnie Wilson set-to will be headlined. Provo, a Marine sergeant, gave veteran Wilson a solid licking when they met at the Coliseum 3 weeks ago.

Wilson did not look sharp in that scrap. He has much more ability than he showed. On the other hand, Provo is a rising, hungry fighter and he may write finis to Wilson's career if he duplicates his previous showing.

On the night of the 28th card, ladies will be admitted free of charge, escorted or not. Youngsters under 12, with an adult, will also be admitted free.

The Coliseum is at 15th and E sts, in downtown San Diego.

Lomelin, Martinez, Moro On Downtown Bullring Card

Ace matador Manolo Martinez, the versatile and daring Antonio Lomelin, and young Humberto Moro will face brave bulls of Santo Domingo Sunday in the downtown bullring, El Torero de Tijuana, beginning at 4 p.m.

This will be the last scheduled corrida of the summer in the downtown arena. Starting July 30, the bullfights will be held each Sunday in the bullring by the sea, Plaza Monumental de Tijuana.

Martinez, 32, of Monterrey and Lomelin, 33, of Acapulco are off to strong starts in a battle for honors as top award-winners of the season. But for Moro, 20, of Mexico City, this will be his first Tijuana corrida of 1978.

Moro, a stocky blond who is the son of retired matador Humberto Moro, long a Tijuana favorite, went home without awards after his two Tijuana corridas last summer. But many observers feel the judge was unfair to him.

Moro probably was at his best on July 24 with a bull of Xajay. Moro deserved at least one ear for his sword work alone, and many fans and critics felt he deserved two, because his faena was excellent.

Instead, he was encouraged to take two turns around the arena. This also is a symbol of triumph. His second bull that day was virtually unfightable.

Martinez will be making his fourth appearance of the summer, and probably his last until late September. Lomelin will be in his third Tijuana corrida. Last summer Lomelin was the star of the season, and he got off to a fine start this year by cutting four ears May 7.

Lomelin is noted especially for his valorous and artistic placement of banderillas. Some times he breaks them off to about six inches in length, and then this act is even more thrilling.

Martinez is often considered to be Mexico's top torero. He quickly gains control of his foe, nearly always presents a faena with both hands, and he fills his work with art and courage.

Cherry Fruit Flies Reported In Shasta County Orchard

An infestation of cherry fruit fly has been reported for the first time in eastern Shasta County and has given rise to fears that the pest could spread to the commercial cherry orchards in San Joaquin, Santa Clara and other counties.

The discovery site is a small orchard at Montgomery Creek, near Burney, and about 30 miles northeast of Redding. The extent of the infestation will not be known until experts from the Shasta County Agricultural Department and the California Department of Food and Agriculture have had a chance to look at the site.

Maggots of cherry fruit flies have been found before in several northern counties, which have been quarantined against the movement of fruit to other areas. The California Department of Food and Agriculture carries out detection programs annually and, where indicated, control and eradication measures to control the spread of the pest.

Detection surveys in other parts of California have shown the state is free of the pest except in portions of the extreme northern counties which are under quarantine. Occasional reports of new finds are always investigated.

State and county authorities say the maggots are picked up and spread by travelers who purchase cherries at roadside stands in the northwest and in the Willow Creek area of Trinity and Humboldt Counties.

"Hopefully, most of them do not carry their purchases long distances or otherwise we would have problems in our sweet cherry growing areas," said Director Richard Rominger of the CDFA.

"Nevertheless, I am appealing to all motorists to avoid purchasing and transporting infested cherries into California from Oregon and the other northwest states and into the rest of the state from the Willow Creek area."

San Joaquin County has 8,812 acres, or 67 per cent of the commercial production of cherries. Its annual approximate value in San Joaquin is $14,000,000. Santa Clara is the second leading county with 909 acres, 7 per cent of the state's total, and yields an annual value of $1,461,000. Other counties acreage and values are: San Benito 329, ($526,000); Contra Costa 317, ($509,000); Merced 310, ($498,000); and Stanislaus 278, ($447,000).

SD Job Prospects Bleak, Bank Says

San Diego County's continued high population growth is expected to create a need for more new jobs in an area already experiencing an above average unemployment rate, a bank researcher said.

According to statistics compiled by Security Pacific Bank the county's population by mid-1985 might be more than 2 million. It was noted that since 1970, the net in migrations has accounted for 75 per cent of the area's population growth.

As a result, the number of jobs often has not kept pace with growth in the number of job seekers.

It's Your Money

By John Foley

You would not think of asking a plumber to fix a leak, or a carpenter to build something unless you were sure they had the proper tools to complete the job in a satisfactory manner.

Often, many business people ask a bank loan officer or credit analyst to make a judgment of a request for credit without providing them with the tools necessary to ensure the success of the application. The tool a credit person needs is a financial statement.

Actually, a financial statement is the combination of separate exhibits. First — a statement of assets and liabilities, called a balance sheet. Second, a statement of income and expense, known as profit and loss statement. Third — and just as important, a reconciliation of net worth.

Obviously, a statement that has been prepared by a Certified Public Accountant, audited, containing explanatory notes and carrying his certification is the most creditable, recognized and appreciated by the credit person. In some cases, an audited statement is a "must" in consideration for credit. More often, an unaudited statement which has been prepared by a company employee, owner or an accountant is acceptable, if properly and accurately prepared.

Most credit people will transcribe the information from the statement on to forms called "spread sheets". A spread sheet condenses the information shown on the statement, assists the analyst in the calculation of ratios and helps him or her in establishing trends. Also, spread sheets will enable the credit person to make comparison with another business in the area or the national average.

As an aid to business owners, managers and analysts, Dun and Bradstreet and NCR publish booklets which show a number of ratios, usually 14, on over 100 lines of retailing, wholesaling, manufacturing and constructions businesses. These booklets are available locally, but in limited quantities.

It is important to know how to figure the "current ratio" — "debt to worth" ratios, for example and what they mean. Historically, lenders and analysts use ratios more than owners or managers do. Ratios can show trends and can provide early warnings for pending trouble. They can also show favorable trends and indicators of continued business success.

Of course, providing a complete and accurate financial statement does not insure a yes answer, but it is a positive step towards what you hope will be a favorable response to your application for credit. If your application is turned down, you should apply to another source. Not all credit people draw the same conclusions, given the same information.

Raisin Assessment Not To Increase

A proposed amendment to the Marketing Order for California Raisins which would have increased the maximum assessment rate from $20 per ton to $30 per ton will not be issued by State Director of Food and Agriculture R. E. Rominger for approval by the industry.

In declining to issue the amendment, Rominger noted that there was sufficient indication of negative votes expressed at the June 22 public hearing in Fresno to make approval impossible. "Under these circumstances," Rominger said, "the expense of a referendum or assent procedure would be unjustified."

Proponents presented testimony and evidence that in recent seasons, when the Marketing Order carried on national advertising and promotion in accordance with recommendations of a marketing research study, sales of raisins increased substantially. Opponents testified that the proposed increase was not necessary to continue an acceptable program.

The maximum rate of assessment which may be levied under the Marketing Order remains at the $20 per ton level which was in effect in 1977.

During the 6 weeks at Lackland, the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special instruction in human relations. Completion of this training earned the individual credits towards an associate in applied science degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

About Your Health

Asthma in Children

Asthma is a form of allergy in which the reaction is localized in the lungs. Sometimes it takes the form of attacks of very difficult breathing. In its milder form, the child coughs and occasionally wheezes, particularly at night.

Like other allergies, asthma is caused by an abnormal sensitivity to specific substances (allergens).

A substance which is totally harmless to one person may create an allergic reaction in another. The most common type of allergen in asthma is an inhalant such as house dust, pollen or animal dander. Foods or beverages also can act as allergens.

The child who has one form of allergic response is quite likely to develop others. For example, an asthmatic child frequently has had eczema in infancy and usually has allergic rhinitis, which takes the form of chronic stuffiness, sneezing and itching of the nose.

Although asthma almost always can be managed successfully, many families fail to treat it for years for two reasons.

First, the combination of asthma and allergic rhinitis creates symptoms which often are mistaken for respiratory infections.

The child sneezes, coughs and may even run a fever. As a result, the parents mistakenly think the child has a head cold which has gone into the chest, and the child is treated repeatedly as having bronchitis or pneumonia rather than asthma.

Every child is sure to have an occasional head cold but the child with continuous or recurrent attacks of "colds," cough and chest mucus should be examined for a possible unrecognized asthma.

Second, there is a widespread belief that children outgrow asthma when they reach adolescence.

Sometimes they do, but follow-up studies on large groups of asthmatic children show that only about one third of these children stop having asthma completely.

Another third continue to have intermittent asthma and about one third become chronic asthmatics. Waiting to see if a child will "outgrow" asthma may expose the child to years of unnecessary discomfort and undermine his or her general health.

The first step in treating a child's asthma is to find out to what substances he or she is allergic.

Two methods are available — careful observation and allergy testing. Doctors rely heavily on the cooperation of parents in the first process.

Parents should observe carefully all the conditions and circumstances under which the child develops asthmatic reactions.

It often is easier to detect the causes of the sneezing and the itchy nose than of the coughing and wheezing. Since the same irritant is causing both types of allergic reaction, any clues the parents observe about the nasal symptoms also will apply to the asthma.

Sometimes, especially with food allergies, it is necessary to go through a long process of trial and error, eliminating first one suspected allergen and then another and observing any changes in the child's condition.

In the second method, the child is tested directly with many likely sources of allergy in his or her environment. This method works best when allergy is due to inhaled substances and may save a great deal of time over the trial and error method. The interpretation of allergy tests requires experience and should be done only by a well-trained physician.

Once the substances that cause the asthma are identified, they should be removed completely from the child's environment. A common cause of asthma in children is house dust. If that has been established as the allergen, the physician will outline a detailed procedure for removal of house dust, particularly from the child's bedroom where the child spends approximately 50 percent of his or her time.

If animal hair or dander has been established as the allergen, household pets must be banished. Food which has been established as a cause of the allergic reaction must be eliminated from the diet.

It is not always feasible to purge a child's environment completely of the offending allergen. For example, airborne substances such as pollen cannot readily be avoided. In certain cases, particularly pollen cases, asthma is treated by giving the child a series of injections which gradually builds up an immunity to the allergen. In the case of food allergies, however, injections are not recommended.

Many allergic persons seem to have a variable course of illness. They know they are allergic but they can tolerate a certain amount of exposure to allergens, so postpone treatment.

Maintaining this state of balance, however, is unwise as any additional stress may upset it.

Fatigue, tension, excitement, catching a cold or exposure to foggy weather may bring on an attack of asthma.

Treatment takes patience and diligence but through treatment the child can be spared years of physically and psychologically debilitating illness.

Thermal R-Values is Key To Insulation Efficiency

Those buying insulation for a brand new home or are making plans to retrofit an existing one, have an opportunity to apply a little consumer know-how which could add up to hundreds of dollars of savings on heating and cooling bills.

Look for the R-value on the bags, says Gregory J. Fitzgerald, executive director of the Society of International Cellulose Insulation Manufacturers (SICIM). Insulation performance, he says, is measured in R-values, a number indicating resistance to winter heat loss or summer heat gain; that is, its thermal efficiency in resisting the flow of heat.

"The higher the R-value," Fitzgerald noted, "the more effective the insulation. R-values are a function of both the type and thickness of an insulating material. For example, to achieve R-30 in the attic, if the consumers were to use loose and blown fill, they would require either 13½ inches thickness of glass fiber, or 10 inches of rock wool, or 8 inches of cellulose insulation. The relative efficiency of each type is obvious.

The SICIM spokesman stressed that the amount of material needed to insulate a home depends on factors such as climate, size of home, type of heating fuel being used (electric, gas or oil), weatherized condition of the house, or areas of the house to be insulated (attic, walls, floors).

"Of all the areas of the house, the attic will need insulating material giving the highest R-value," he notes. But know what you are doing before you start; read the instructions on the bag; and see that they are carried out.

He also stressed the importance of pricing the R-value for any insulating material being considered. "Pay more only for more R-value."

When talking insulation, Fitzgerald said, talk in terms of R-values. Bags should always be marked with R-values and coverage figures. While these figures may vary for different manufacturers, the coverage figure will give a definite projection of how many bags of material the do-it-yourself consumer or insulation contractor should install to achieve the desired R-value.

Those seeking additional material on home insulating should contact the Society of International Cellulose Insulation Manufacturers (SICIM) at 7610 Pennsylvania ave., Suite 307, Washington, D.C. 20028.

Twenty More Homes Ready in Rancho SD

Presales have begun on the first phase of 20 homes in Canterbury Hill, a community Rancho San Diego according to Patty Simpson, sales and marketing director.

Ranging in size from 1671 sq. ft., Canterbury Hill homes, most with views, overlook the Cottonwood Valley. French doors, exterior balconies, built-in wet bars and double lavatories are featured in most plans. Optionals include air conditioning and parquet flooring in libraries. Landscaped open spaces with picnic and playground areas are provided, including underground utilities and cable TV.

Weapons Displayed In Museum Exhibit

Weapons of hunting and warfare, including bows, arrows, blow-guns, poisoned darts and cross bows, are on view in the renovated and expanded Jessop's weapon collection at the San Diego Museum of Man.

In the exhibit, titled "Man the Hunter," the weapons of the Eskimo, Northwest Coast, and Plains Indians are shown in conjunction with artifacts of their cultural environments to show how man made his living and hunting decisions. The available game, plus the available materials from which he could fashion weapons to make his kill, are explored.

The exhibit further traces the new materials and techniques that man incorporated into his life as outside trade became part of his life.

For more than 30 years, ending in 1912, Jessop and his agents bartered with natives world-wide, and compiled a private collection of over 5,000 weapons of astounding size, variety and detail. In this new exhibit, 250 of the most significant and dramatic will be on display.

In addition to the North American Indians, weapons from other cultures will be on display.

The heaviest bow is in the group from Mongolia. With a pull of 150 pounds, it can send an arrow 500 feet. The weakest bow, with a pull of 6 pounds, is from the Pygmies of Africa.

More Precautions Taken Against Air Hijacking

As an increased precaution against terrorist activity the Federal Aviation Administration will require airlines to screen charter-flight passengers and their carry-on luggage.

Increased international terrorist activity and a basic change in the Civil Aeronautics Board's regulation of charter flights are the reasons for the new security regulations, which will become effective July 25.

The Civil Aeronautics Board actions, which included elimination of the requirement that only clubs or other groups with common interests can qualify for reduced charter fares, removed much of the protection from hijacking that charter flights have had in the past. That protection resulted from the fact that a stranger intent on hijacking and aircraft would be quickly spotted in a group in which everyone knows everyone else.

And the increase in the terrorist threat — 31 hijacking attempts worldwide in 1977 compared to 15 in 1976—could lead terrorists, looking for easier targets than those presented by the scheduled airlines, to attempt to hijack charter flights.

The new regulations will apply to the charter operations of 30 flag and domestic certificated carriers, the 10 supplemental (all-charter) carriers, the charter operations of more than 200 foreign carriers into or out of the United States, and the charter operations of six commercial carriers that conduct scheduled intrastate passenger service.

The regulations also will require airport operators and airlines to provide for the presence of armed law enforcement officers to assist in the screening of charter flight passengers just as they have heretofore been available to assist in the screening of scheduled flight passengers.

Your Good-bye Could Be Some-One's Good Buy.

Parting with familiar objects is sometimes as difficult as saying good-bye to an old friend. Your pet lion. The encyclopedia you inherited. The ping-pong table nobody uses any more. The bicycle you bought but never rode.

Your home is filled with things you have acquired over the years. But now they just stand around and collect dust.

Take a look around. You probably need more room in your garage or attic. Now it's time to start saying good-bye to some of your possessions — and even to earn money in the process.

Put an ad in the paper. For your pet lion or your ping-pong table. Whatever you want to sell, it could be someone's good buy.

Say it through an ad.
Say it through us.
